For more than 40 years Summit has built an international reputation for creating the finest, most beautiful and versatile outdoor furniture in the world. Sustainability and endurance have always been at the heart of the company. In his mission statement all those years ago, founder William Sieberts declared his promise “to allow in our collection only products worthy of a lifetime guarantee as symbolised by the Summit identification plate affixed to every piece”.

This commitment to creating modern heirlooms designed to last for generations has made Summit the go-to brand for discerning customers; its legacy pieces can be found in luxury resorts and residences across the globe and feature frequently on superyachts.

Summit has been committed to sustainability since the very beginning. Only the highest-grade FSC-certified teak from sustainably managed plantations is used in the furniture. As well as always using sustainably grown materials, Summit is also committed to environmental forestry and the well-being of the people of Indonesia, where the company sources its wood.

Every Summit piece expertly combines exceptional design and unrivalled performance and function in an aesthetically pleasing way. Each little detail has been painstakingly thought out by skilled craftspeople, from interlocking finger joints and compound angles to innovative aesthetic approaches. Every piece is a masterclass of style with substance.

Summit has collaborated with renowned superyacht design studio Winch Design on Arc, a debut furniture collection inspired by the sea and sky. The beautiful texture of nautical rope is evoked by the clever weaving of laminated teak between brushed stainless-steel rods. The collection includes a variety of chairs, tables and a sofa and is ideal for superyachts.

Summit's new line of endurance fabrics are testament to the company's vision of combining performance and luxury. These high tech, low maintenance premium textiles are the perfect solution for sophisticated indoor and outdoor living. Naturally they come in an array of textures, chic patterns and muted colours such as Terracotta, Sky Mist, Twilight and Feather. The material is fade-resistant, stain- and water-repellent and highly durable while maintaining optimum comfort and style – making them an obvious choice for use on deck.

While always looking to the future, Summit also treasures history, whether demonstrated by the use of natural wood – the patina proudly displayed on Summit's furniture atop a yacht deck – or in the ever-available customer service should a client desire to restore a piece to its original complexion.

That commitment to endurance and legacy is what makes Summit stand out and gives it its well-deserved reputation as the creator of “precious antiques of the future”. It is no wonder that its superior furniture, be it a chair, table or chaise, are found in the villas of Monaco, on the shores of the Great Lakes, on the decks of superyachts and everywhere in between. Discerning customers around the world collect Summit pieces safe in the knowledge they have masterpieces that are built to stand the test of time.
