SHORT LIST

NOVEL Approach

WHAT'S SUMMER
VACATION WITHOUT THE CRACK OF A SPINE?

How guilty are your guilty pleasures? And should the beach read—a novel that keeps you glued to a chaise longue despite sun and spray—always be on the list? Not if you've chosen wisely. For example, all of the books pictured above—The Sport of Kings, C.E. Morgan's harrowing look at the Kentucky racing scene; Eligible,

Curtis Sittenfeld's smartly imagined paean to Pride and Prejudice; The Girls, Emma Cline's oddly seductive portrait of a cult; and Kemper Donovan's mysterious romance, The Decent Proposal—feature finely drawn characters, compelling prose, and riveting (okay, juicy) plots. We suggest pairing with a club sandwich and an exquisitely lazy afternoon. «
